ABOUT THE BRAND –

Thums Up, launched in 1977 by Parle Agro, is a strong, fizzy cola known for its bold taste and high caffeine content. Positioned as a masculine and adventurous brand, it gained popularity with its tagline “Taste the Thunder.” In 1993, Coca-Cola acquired it but kept it due to strong consumer demand. Thums Up has maintained its dominance through aggressive marketing, celebrity endorsements, and associations with extreme sports and action-packed campaigns, making it one of India's most iconic soft drink brands.

WHY I CHOOSE THIS BRAND –

1

Strong Brand Image – Thums Up is bold, energetic, and easily recognized by people.

2

Popular & Trusted – It has been a favorite in India for many years, with a loyal fan base.

3

Unique Taste – Its strong, fizzy flavor makes it different from other colas.

4

Powerful Advertising – Action-packed ads and celebrity support keep the brand exciting

COLOR PSYCHOLOGY –

The dominant color in Thums Up's logo represents power, energy, excitement, and passion. It aligns with the brand's adventurous and high-intensity positioning.

The deep blue in the logo conveys trust, strength, and reliability. It balances the fierceness of red, making the brand appear dependable and strong.

Used for contrast, white symbolizes clarity and simplicity, ensuring the logo stands out while maintaining a clean and impactful look.

SEGMENTATION-

Thums Up appeals to a broad range of consumers, primarily targeting young, energetic, and adventurous individuals. The brand is popular in both cities, with a strong presence across India.

1. Tier 1 Cities (Metro & Urban Consumers)

Young professionals, college students, adventure-seekers, and those who prefer a strong, fizzy cola.

Cities: Mumbai, Delhi, Bangalore, Chennai, Kolkata, Hyderabad, Pune, Ahmedabad

2. Tier 2 Cities (Growing Urban Markets)

Middle-class families, small business owners, students, and people who enjoy bold flavors.

Cities: Jaipur, Lucknow, Indore, Bhopal, Surat, Nagpur, Patna, Chandigarh, Coimbatore, Bhubaneswar, Vishakhapatnam, Ludhiana, Guwahati, Mysore

COMPETITOR ANALYSIS -

IMPACT SALES OF COCA-COLA -

Thums Up plays a big role in Coca-Cola's sales in India. Since Coca-Cola owns both brands, it can offer choices to different types of cola lovers—Coca-Cola for those who prefer a smooth taste and Thums Up for those who like a stronger, fizzier drink. This helps Coca-Cola keep more customers, especially in smaller cities where Thums Up is more popular. In fact, Thums Up often sells more than Coca-Cola in India because people love its bold taste. It also helps Coca-Cola compete with Pepsi by giving customers a stronger alternative. Instead of competing with each other, both brands work together to keep Coca-Cola's sales strong.

IMPACT SALES OF PEPSI -

Thums Up has a big impact on Pepsi's sales in India by attracting people who prefer a stronger and fizzier cola. While Pepsi has a sweeter and smoother taste, many Indian consumers, especially in smaller cities and towns, choose Thums Up for its bold flavor. This makes it harder for Pepsi to gain a bigger market share. Thums Up's strong brand image, action-packed ads, and loyal fan base also keep many customers from switching to Pepsi. As a result, Pepsi struggles to compete in India's cola market, where Thums Up remains a popular choice, especially among those who enjoy a more intense and exciting cola experience.

MARKET SHARE OF COCA-COLA -

Coca-Cola is the leading soft drink brand in India, holding around 60% of the market share by value and 57% by volume. Its popular brands like Thumbs Up (16%) and Sprite (20%) contribute significantly to its dominance. Pepsi follows as the second-largest player with 33% market share by value. Recently, Campa Cola has entered the market with a small 2% share. The diagram below visually represents Coca-Cola's strong position in the Indian soft drink market.

MARKET SHARE OF PEPSI -

PepsiCo holds 33% of the soft drink market in India, making it the second-biggest player after Coca-Cola, which leads with 60% market share. The remaining 7% is shared by smaller brands like Campa Cola. The pie chart above shows this clearly. While Pepsi is strong, it faces tough competition from Coca-Cola, which has a wider range of popular drinks.

CONSUMER BEHAVIOUR OF THUMS UP-

- Consumers prefer Thums Up for its bold, intense flavor compared to other colas.
- Mostly chosen by young adults and thrill-seekers who enjoy action and excitement.
- More preferred in Tier 2 & Tier 3 cities, where people enjoy stronger soft drinks.
- The brand's bold and adventurous image appeals more to men.
- Often paired with street food, biryani, and other spicy dishes.
- Many drinkers have been loyal to Thums Up for years and don't switch to other colas.
- Action-packed ads and celebrity endorsements make the brand more exciting.

CONSUMER BEHAVIOUR OF COCA-COLA -

- Consumers choose Coca-Cola for its classic and refreshing taste, backed by strong branding.
- Young people enjoy it with fast food, while older consumers prefer it occasionally.
- Thums Up is preferred by those who like a stronger cola, while Coca-Cola & Sprite appeal to those who enjoy a smoother taste.
- Often consumed at parties, gatherings, and celebrations.
- Celebrity endorsements and emotional ads create a loyal customer base.
- Found in restaurants, retail stores, and vending machines, making it a convenient choice.

CONSUMER BEHAVIOUR OF PEPSI -

- Consumers who prefer a milder, sweeter cola often choose Pepsi over other brands.
- Pepsi targets young consumers with trendy and fun marketing campaigns.
- Often paired with burgers, pizzas, and other fast food items.
- Some consumers prefer Pepsi because of its long-standing presence and familiar taste.
- Uses famous celebrities and sports stars to attract younger audiences.
- Found in restaurants, movie theaters, and stores, often with discounts or combo offers.
- Pepsi competes mainly with Coca-Cola in metro cities but struggles against Thums Up in smaller towns.

PRIMARY EFFECTS -

The bold taste and adventurous image of Thums Up set the tone for its strong and fearless brand perception. Its high fizz and spicy cola kick make it stand out from other colas, reinforcing the idea of power and intensity. This unique experience influences purchasing decisions, as consumers looking for a stronger, more thrilling soft drink choose Thums Up over sweeter alternatives. The brand's action-packed advertising and association with adventure and masculinity create a deep emotional connection with its audience. Over time, this connection builds brand loyalty, as people continue to choose Thums Up not just for its taste, but for the bold and exciting lifestyle it represents.
